

"Does Blakely Mean the End of the Federal Guidelines?"

a discussion with

Frank Bowman

Frank Bowman is the M. Dale Palmer Professor of Law at Indiana University School of Law and an editor of the Federal Sentencing Reporter, a publication co-produced by Vera and the University of California Press. He previously served as counsel to the United States Sentencing Commission, as a federal and state prosecutor and has been a member of the Practitioners Advisory Group of the U.S. Sentencing Commission and an academic advisor to the Criminal Law Committee of the Federal Judicial Conference.

In the past month, Professor Bowman testified before the United States Senate and House Judiciary Committees about the implications of Blakely for the federal sentencing guidelines.

August 12, 2004 8:00 – 9:45 a.m.

Vera Institute of Justice

Herb Sturz – Burke Marshall Conference Center

The Woolworth Building

233 Broadway, 12th Floor

8:00-8:30 breakfast / reception

8:30-9:45 formal discussion

RSVP to Anna Kornilakis akornilakis@vera.org or 212.376.3084 by August 9, as seating is limited.